Award-winning author Myra Johnson writes Christian romance and women's fiction—emotionally gripping stories about love, life, and faith. Her Heartsong Presents romance Autumn Rains (November 2009) won RWA's 2005 Golden Heart for Best Inspirational Romance Manuscript. In 2010 the book was named a finalist in the Short Contemporary Romance category of the prestigious ACFW Carol Awards.

Myra's writing career was launched with her first short story sale in 1985. Since then her stories, articles, and devotions have appeared in more than 30 publications. She taught magazine writing for The Institute of Children's Literature for nine years and was also a frequent contributor to Christ in Our Home, the quarterly devotional publication of Augsburg Fortress Press. Her first novel, One Imperfect Christmas, debuted from Abingdon Press in September 2009. She currently has eight novels and an anthology in print. Her latest effort is a post-World War I historical romance series titled "Till We Meet Again" for Abingdon Press. Book one, When the Clouds Roll By, was an October 2013 release, to be followed by Whisper Goodbye (April 2014) and Every Tear a Memory (October 2014). The novels are set in one of the Johnsons' favorite vacation spots, Hot Springs, Arkansas.

Married since 1972, Myra and her husband are the proud parents of two beautiful daughters who, along with their godly husbands, have huge hearts for ministry. Four rambunctious grandsons and two (soon to be three) precious granddaughters take up another big chunk of Myra's heart. A native Texan, Myra and her husband moved to the Carolinas in 2011 and share their home with two very spoiled lapdogs. The Johnsons enjoy participating in their church's vocal choir.

Myra writes full-time and is a member of American Christian Fiction Writers, currently serving as president of ACFW-Charlotte Chapter. She also belongs to Romance Writers of America and the online RWA chapter Faith, Hope & Love. Myra is represented by the Natasha Kern Literary Agency.
